Its geo-strategic position at the crossroad between European and Asian culture, Eastern and Western civilization, was the cause for many battles (115 in total) that Belgrade was exposed to throughout its history. It is the most frequently destroyed and rebuilt city - more than 38 times.

Belgrade is in the vicinity of archaeological sites of great importance both according to the global and European parameters, and that makes it special. It is also near popular small towns and other natural and cultural values of great importance.
